We publish an article from the New York Times, one of the special organs of Abreham Lincoin, in which the writer andertakes to tell us what the North is fighting for and what it is not fighting for, and what the South is fighting for and what it is not fighting

The North, we are told, is not fighting against elavery; there is nothing in that issue to prevent peace.

The South is not fighting for elevery either Jeff. Davis told the truth when he said so. The South would enerifice the institution and free ail the slaves to gain its end. All quite sensible, if true; but the writer sets aside Abraham Lincoln's late declarations and the declarations of his party in making this statement. We are to have no union wi h slave States, is the doctrine now promalgated every where. A State like Kentucky, that has never so ecded, that is as much a State of the Union seever, is required, as a test of loyalty, to abolish slavery. This organ, then, misstates the case. That the desiruction of slavery is a large to leave a proclamation. the case. That the destruction of slavery is a mesns only to su cyd is a miscrable fallacy. coln is not going to issue a ... The Government ought, at least, to use frankness and honesty. Let Abraham Lincoin say what the Times saye for him. We are told that the olject of the Government is the integrity of our territory, and nothing less or more, It is remarkable that these same men and the party with the same antecedents opposed the acquisition of Louisiana, did not like the acquisition of Florida, and need sil and silver are not as contradiction of single-need to prevent the acquisition of Texas. The whole territory we now have they d not want. How suddenly they have been converted to the importance of having it all The Democratic party made all these acquisitions in spite of a party, that now will wage an eternal war to kee, them.

We are glad that they are converted. They wen! Louisisus now, and all Texas and Florids; but we could do as well without bem now, as we could have done Lad we nev acunired any of them. The Times concludes that we are not fight-fighting for it. Why, then, not let it alone? The issue is Union or disunion, and we are told that the North is resolved to maintain the stegrity of the soil at all hezards; if they nust exterminate the lubsbltants and repeople the country, or even do worse. Still they will colidated government. The misfortane is, the party to which the Times belongs. The States have no rights that the Federal Government is bound to respect to their creed.

The rebel doctrine of State rights made the tates independent nations. Practically, they Abelitionists have done. The fact is, the g bbte about State rights, in view of their practices, is unintelligible ronsense on either side. Notwithstanding all the theories that may be put forth, the parties are fighting because they are med and hate each other. They will not seitle by eny theory, for neliber have any that they have regarded in practice. The proposition of Boyce. that the States shall meet in convention, is sensible, without any regard to theory. This is revolution, prompted by ambition and sectional hate, got up by demagogues and intensified by the guilty glories of war, and the question is, had not all theories better he dropped and an a" mpt made for a practical ettlement

The New York Evening Post (Repub lican) is becoming dissatisfied with the way telegraphic dispatches are gotten up and issued from Weshington. He speaks very vohemently on the sabject, and very scorafully into the bargain. We are afraid some shrewd reporter, some mischievous Howard, has been doing the venerable editor of the Post. He has dropped down on him in the funds, made im sesert some absurd contradiction as ver itable truth, packed him into a fictitious cabl net connell, introduced him to fletitious con a selers and deinded him into the publication of a batch of obominable lies. Hinc illae Loo rymae, as the Latin grammer care.

Whatever the canse, the editor gives a very graphic description of how the thing is done As he evidently speaks by the card, we give what he has to say of it:

WASHINGTON DISPATCHES AND THE JURNALS WASHINGTON DISPATCHES AND THE JULINALS If any kind of peragraph in a newspaper is of less consequence and deserves less attention than all others, it is that which gives chape to be goode of the hotels and actorooms of Washington. The Southern messes have been made to be-lieve that the North has been fighting to de-stroy slavery, to overthrow State rights and to surjugate and degrade Southern whites. All this is false, The North, though it may dealroy slavery in waging war, does not wage war to destry akwary. There is not ling about slavery that would prevent the North from making peace to morrow, if it could. It is quite willing to have the whole disposal of hat autifect to futnee praceful and cocatitu densi sector. In no term or d gree is the ed-

The North is fighting purely and almply to save the nuity of the usition. It has an absolute the nuity of the usition. It has an absolute assurance that this unity is indispensable to the coulinnance of free and good government on this coulines—that without it there will be conscious conflict, which will be forever extrausuring the treasure and draining the ulcod of both regions notified and in chaos. It is sometime read that we are fighting for the supremacy of the Constitution. But the supremacy of the Constitution is not an ultimate end. "Story of a Poem." The Coninnance of this war, with sill has terrible work, one day beyond an actual necessity, would be the meet enormous of crimes. It is of supreme moment, then, to both sides to know just what constitute this secessity, and just where trous it in the fair held in that city in aid of the Sanitary Commission, was a copy of Mrs. Akers' celebrated song—"Rock Me to Sleep," sent by the authoress in answer to a request of the commission, was a copy of Mrs. Akers' celebrated song—"Rock Me to Sleep," sent by the authoress in answer to a request of the committee on autographs that she would contribute manuscript copies of some of her poems. The poem has been the hard south it should be daily seen in ha bare pith.

What is the North Arbiting for?

The Southern messes have been made to be-like to the state of this country and in Europe. One of these compositions has passed through a pward of fifty editions; and many thousands of dollars must have been realized by copies of some of her poems. The poem has been set to music by at least eight composers in this country and in Europe. One of these compositions has passed through npward of fifty editions; and many thousands of dollars must have been realized by the music publishers, who appropriated i immediately on its appearance, without so much as asking parmission to do so.

There has been a good deal of dispute about the authorship of this song; some ciaiming it, very confidently, for their friends, and others, very impudently, for themselves. To those who are acquainted with the fine and sensitive nature in which this tender poem had its origin, it appears in nowise singular that such claims can be set up and persisted in without any risk of contradiction from the real author, while the fact that she authorized its original publication nader her enstomary nom d plume, and has permitted it to be vary gan-erally copied by the newspaper press of the country with her real name attached, should, in view of the brilliant rapulation already acquired at the time it first ap-peared, be swidence sufficient everywhere and with evrybody that whatever of erediattaches to this production is due to Mrs Akers, and to her alone. We copy from the Portland (Me.) Transcript the follow-ing interesting statement concerning this matter, and append a vortect version of the

ong itself:

"Few poems of the present time have had wider circulation than the beautiful lines of Mrs. Akers—more widely known under the nom de plume of Florence Perey—enti-tled 'Rock Me to Sleep, Mother.' They have been published by nearly every newspaper in the land, printed in books, set to music and sung and recited in thousands of house holds. The sentiment they breethe of a longing for a mother's care and a return to the anburdened hours of childhood comes home to the hearts of all who have exparienced-and who has not?-the heart-aches of this weary world.

"Like most poems which have attained a wide newspaper circulation, these verses have met with a variety of adventures and mishaps. They have, in some instances, been shorn of their fair proportions, in there laid elaim to by ambitious aspirants powtical honors, and again have had ap-pended to them a romantic history quite audiciant on which to found a three-volume novel. An instance of the latter kind we find in the Merced Banner, a California newspaper, to which one 'J. W.' contributes a very affecting history of the author of 'Rock Me to Sleep.' ife is 'not at liberty to give her name, but furnishes her with a exceer as full of romance and misfortune as any novel-reader could desire.

"After the usual accompaniments of an elopement, an unworthy husband, 'a cruel parient,' who is made to relent by the perusal of this poem, written on a sick-bed with a view to a reconciliation, the verecious 'J. W.' finally ends the author's 'sirange, eventful history' by killing her off with hereditary consumption, 'three years ago.' The San Francisco Sunday Mercury copies this imaginative narrative, the editor sagely remarking that 'the story is not new to us,' and appending a mutilated copy of the now famous verses. And this is fame! The authoress, however, should not complain she may thank her stars that she is yet permitted to live.

"Aguin, we tourn that in a western city a married lady whose maiden name, singularly snough, was Florence l'ercy, is grati-fying a desire for literary honors by claiming this poem as her own production.

The true history of the poem may be given in a few words. It was written by mond.

WANT OF DECISION .- Sidney Smith, in his work on Moral Philosophy, speaks in this wise o' what men lose for want of a little "bras," as it is termed:

A great deal of talent is lost to the world for the want of a little courage. Every day sends to their graves a number of obsoure men, who have only remained in ob them from making a first effort, and who, if they only had been ludneed to begin, reald, in all probability, have gone great lengthe in the career of fama. that in doing anything in the world worth loing, wa must not stand shivering on the bank thinking of the cold and danger, jump in and scramble through as well as

It will not do to be perpetually calculateratic pole on Monday. The fall of the pole was greeted by vociferons shouts from Uncle Sam's black boys on the Courthouse hill. The streamer, bearing the names of McClellan and and live to see its success for six or seven continues afterwards; but at present a man taken down by Tom Heary the next day after waits and doubts, and consults hie brothers, and his uncles, and his particular friends, till one day ha finds that ha is sixty-five years of age, that he has lost so much time in consulting first cousins and particular friends that he has ne more time to follow their advice. There is so little time for overequeamishing at present, that the op-portunity slips away. The very period of life at which man chooses to venture, if ever, is so confined that it is no bad rule to preach up the necessity, in such instances, of a little violance done to the feelings and efforts made in defiance of strict and

There are various rumors in regard to the resent whereabouts of General Breckinridge and his rebel forces. He is reported first as coming into Kentucky at or near Cumberland Gap; then crossing the Cumberland at or near Caribage, Tennessee; suddenly be is reported at Burkeville; then again at Columbia, Adair county, Kentucky; next be is in full rush for Camp Nelson and " on to L'x'ngton " We believe that it is the object of Breckinridge to visit the " blue grass region" (whereof he has kindly recoilections), if the Federal forces do not intervene to prevent it.

From all these remots and springes we have come to the corcineion that the various s'cries are the distempered farcies of those with " pan'c" or the brain. Breckinridge and others doubties intend to come into Kentneky and remain here if they can. It w'll depend upon the efficiency and man-

On Friday last a party of guerrillas went to the house of a person nem.d "rerett, ANY on r r M yo 13, Ky, and, calling him to the door, told he. m they had orders from General

... b for bis arrest. Everett willingly erted in their charge for Paducah, but, on resching the toadside, the guerrillas attacked olm. He restated, knocking one of his assallan e down, when the brother-in-law of Evercu came to his assistance, but was at once shot by the villains and died almost instantly. The eccond shot brought down Everett. The guerrillas then robbed the house of everything of any value and departed. Everett lingered about twenty-four hours and then expired.

REPORTED REPEL BATTERY ON THE ORIO. order, and they are not likely to be worn to any extent. There is little change in the shape of furs, excepting in cuffs, which are made smaller, to suit the small sleeves made both for dresses and cloaks. Collarettes are quite as large, and generally round, although a few are made with a point at the back. They seem to have quite taken the place of the victorine, and also of the half-cape, which is only adhered to by those who regard their comfort more than

In Paris, the muffs for the present month are made of quilted satin, with velvet, swansdown, or grebe borders, or a simpler kind still consists of plush made to match the plush cloaks. As the cold season advances, sable muffs will take the lead, and black velvet will be worn, bordered with

Ladies who wear the lining of their muffs ont every season, by cramming them with multifarious articles collected on every shopping-tour, will appreciate the novel idea of providing them with pockets in the inside, warranted to hold handkerchief, pocket book, pair of new gloves, paper of candy, a package of pearl powder, a ekein of zephyr-worsted, and a paper of pins These pockets are made of stonger materia than the ordinary marcelline lining, and will therefore be a saving as well as afford

The emall bonnets have been received with great favor; and, in fact, aside from their exact adaption to the present mode of dressing the halr, many of them are very pretty and graceful specimens of millinery art. and wide green velvet fringed strings.

These wide fringed ribbons are a late and costly novelty; they make elegant sashes, and are used for that purpose as well as for bonnets.

The French flowers of the present season are nearly all velvet. They are not at all natural, but they are very beautiful-magnificent as specimens of the artificial florist skill, and transcending nature in depth of color and splendor of size. The leaves are not less admirable; instead of the uniform bright, glossy, green surface which they formerly presented, we have them now freeted, veined, and tinted in a thousand different ways. Some seem to be covered with newly-fallen snow, others drop loiled, and all are carefully assimilated to the natural appearance of the foliage which belongs to different plants and flowers.

Coat-sloves, long basques, and wide walst-bands are the features of the winter dresses. The walst-band being generally worn over the basques, which are divided into two or more long flender lappels of (more properly) sash-ends. We warn ladies against more than two, however; as they make the back look broad, and are extremely swkward and ungainly. The front is plain, to accommodate the waist-band and the immense buckle, which is a revival of the fashion thirty years ago. A belt and buckle of this description, of the plainest kind, cost from three to five dollars, so that a set to wear with every dress becomes all the signs, we should judge that it will not be inferior in brilliance and displays of fashion to any of its predecessors. The fall months were occupied by the Presidential canvass, and elections are always nnfavorable to both business and pleasure; and the usual stagnation was intensified this season than thin materials, probably for economical reasons. When muslins and tarlatanes were cheap, a pretty evening dress could be very easily and inexpensively arranged; but now they cost as as much as silk, taking into consideration the larger quantity of material necessary to make them full and elegant, and are more frail and infinitely less available.
